

Let Your Kindness Live On

Your will is not only a way to ensure your family is looked after, it supports the causes you care about and continues to make a difference to people's lives.

Leaving a legacy to a charity can be one of the most meaningful ways to make a positive impact on the world. By leaving a legacy to Children in Distress, you will help to ensure the sick and disabled children in our care receive the support and love they deserve.

In a world where it can be very difficult predicting the level of financial support available from year to year, leaving a legacy can make a real difference. You can help provide long-term stability and support, allowing us to continue providing critical services to children in need. Any gift you choose to leave, large or small, will help support our work for years to come.

Your legacy can also inspire others, serving as an example to family and friends. It's a positive cycle that can create lasting change.

Leaving a legacy can also bring a sense of peace and fulfilment to your life. Knowing that you've made a difference and helped improve the lives of children. It's an opportunity to leave behind a positive mark on the world, and to be remembered for your generosity and kindness.

Writing your will for the first time may feel like a daunting task - but it doesn't have to be. You can start by thinking about what you own, who you want to remember and what is important to you after your gone.

A will is a legal document that lets you decide what happens to your money, property and possessions after your death (including digital assets such as online accounts).

If you have children under 18 it also allows you to assign a legal guardian to look after them.

After you have provided for your family and friends, a gift in your will is an opportunity to make a final and lasting gift to a cause you care about. Essentially, it's a way of continuing the support you showed during your lifetime which helps us plan for the future.

In some cases, leaving a gift to a charity in your will can help reduce the amount of inheritance tax that needs to be paid on your estate. If you'd like to know more about this we recommend discussing it further with a legal professional.
